Freed Airmen From Red China Given Big Hawaiian Reception

By ROBERT C. MILLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
HONOLULU, Aug. 11 (AP) — Eleven American airmen, back from 32 months of hell behind the Red China's Bamboo Curtain, planted their feet on U.S. soil with mixed emotions—some laughing and some near tears.

Six of the men were aboard the C-54 "Belgian," former personal plane of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, which touched down on Hickam Field at 2:42 p.m. HST, 8:42 p.m. EDT, after the flight from Tokyo with a brief fueling stop on Midway Island.

The second plane, bearing the remaining five, landed a few minutes later.

The Air Force and Honolulu's civil authorities were waiting with the kind of reception Hawaii reserves for heroes and visiting millionaires.

Aboard the first plane were Col. John K. Arnold, Jr., Montgomery, Ala.; Capt. Elmer Llewellyn, Missoula, Mont.; Airman 2-C Harry Benjamin Jr., Worthington, Minn.; Airman John W. Thompson, Oregon, Va.; Lt. Wallace Brown, Montgomery, Ala.; and Capt. Eugene J. Vandi, of Clayton, N.Y.

The second plane contained Maj. William H. Baumer, Lewisburg, Pa.; Sgt. Howard W. Brown, St. Paul, Minn.; Capt. John W. Buck, Amesbury, Mass.; Airman 1-C Steve Kiba, Akron, Ohio, and Airman Daniel C. Schmidt, Boise, Idaho.

Two curly Miss Hawaiian beauties were the first persons up the ramp and planted flower leis on Col. Arnold and Thompson as they came through the door.

"The colonel appeared a little surprised by being kissed and exclaimed, 'Gosh!'"

The colonel, highest-ranking officer of the group who was the pilot of the B-29 when it was shot down over North Korea, appeared emotionally upset and tense from his prison nightmare which included months of physical and mental torture.

The others were much more relaxed as they smiled and waved. In the hot Hawaii sun while photographers snapped their pictures.

Asked what he thought about coming home, Lt. Brown said he couldn't express his feelings in words. "Everyone has been wonderful to us," he said. "After 32 months in solitary this is marvelous."

Llewellyn broke down in uncontrolled sobbing when newsmen quizzed him on his imprisonment. Asked if he was subjected to torture, the captain calmly replied: "I certainly was. They gave me the works."

A reporter then remarked he understood that Col. Arnold bore the brunt of the Chinese brutality and that the Reds were easier on the others.

"Like hell they were," the officer retorted. Then he broke down and went as an Air Force officer from the official party, attempted to soothe him.

Airman Schmidt, the "Enoch Arden" of the group who is coming back to face a wife who married again while he was in prison, was handed a press dispatch about possible bigamy charges.

He read the story without speaking and then shook his head dumbly when asked if he had any comment.

Hawaii was going all out to make their 26-hour layover a memorable one.

Tornadoes Heighten Jitters As Hurricane Connie Rolls Slowly

CAPE HATTERAS, N. C., Aug. 11 (AP) — Hurricane Connie, her punch diminished by two days of aimless wallowing at sea, is expected to move inland into North Carolina tonight, the weather bureau said today.

In a special 8 p.m. EDT advisory, the Washington Weather Bureau called off the hurricane alert for the coastal areas from New York to the Delaware breakers.

Water, and said there no longer appears to be any danger of hurricane winds from Connie north of the Virginia capes.

After passing inland, the advisory said, Connie probably will move slowly northward on an inland course.

"Although the hurricane will diminish in intensity before it can move as far north as central Virginia, there is still a possibility of hurricane force winds on the Virginia capes and the Norfolk area late tonight and early Friday."

Three tornadoes struck eastern South Carolina to heighten the jitters of crowds moving off the beaches. Six persons were reported injured in the twisters, two of which struck 65 miles inland and the third just behind the beach.

Joe W. Cable To Receive Ph.D. Degree

Joe W. Cable of Murray will receive his Ph.D. degree from Florida State University, Tallahassee, Fla., in the summer commencement exercises to be held Saturday, August 13, according to an announcement from the university.

Cable is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cable of Murray and is married to the former Wanda McReynolds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Novell McReynolds. He received his B.S. degree from Murray State College and his masters degree from Florida State. He is a graduate of Murray High School.

Justice H. L. (Tom) Sebring of the Florida Supreme Court will be the commencement speaker. He will address the assembled group of graduates, family and friends on "The Duties and Obligations of an Educated Citizen."

CHICAGO, Aug. 11 (AP) — The 47th annual governors' conference was held yesterday that a special session of Congress is needed to deal with President Eisenhower's proposed multi-billion-dollar highway program.

At the same time, the 84th Congress was sharply criticized for failing to pass the program, and several governors bluntly told the federal government to either build roads or stop collecting gasoline taxes.

State governors dwelt on highway construction and safety problems in their first business session. But the 1956 political campaign continued to boil behind the scenes.

Republican Gov. Walter Kohler of Wisconsin told a news conference that Mr. Eisenhower might be expected to announce his intention for 1956 next March 2.

Much of the political talk was engendered by the closeness of Adlai E. Stevenson, titular Democratic leader and 1952 presidential nominee of the party, who lives nearby.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, sometimes spoken of as a possible Democratic presidential candidate himself, said "the time is fast approaching" when Stevenson should speak out.

Williams also mentioned that Mr. Eisenhower would be one of the oldest Presidents to seek re-election and conceivably might die before the next election.

The Michigan governor made the statement in a general discussion that it is too early to tell about 1956 and "anything could happen" nearby.

He said there also conceivably could be a war before the 1956 elections, or any number of other things bearing on the situation.

Williams said Stevenson has "first call" on the Democratic nomination but should announce himself at "a reasonably early time."

He said he assumed that if Stevenson doesn't run, Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, also mentioned prominently at the conference here, will be a candidate.

ANDOVER, Ohio, Aug. 11 (AP) — Bodies of 18 persons killed in a terrific explosion and fire which leveled a block-long building in this small farming town's downtown district lay unidentified today in a makeshift morgue.

Officials attempted to identify the charred victims after matching bodies with extremities which had been counted as separate bodies.

Rescue teams searched the smoking ruins for more dead, and one volunteer said "We'll be producing this debris for a couple of days."

"We haven't even gotten into the rubble," the volunteer said. "Most of the bodies were taken from the top fringe of the debris."

He said rescuers worked with Army wreckage equipment and pick and shovels to clear away the debris.

"We work in teams with each group working until they are too tired or are sickened by the smoke and stench," he said.

The deafening explosion ripped through the building at the height of a lashing rain and electrical storm during the dinner hour Wednesday night. Most of the victims, including 18 injured, had taken shelter in a dairy store and an adjoining restaurant when the blast happened.

Several victims trapped in the dairy store, burned beyond recognition, were found seated at tables with food before them.

Nancy Mock and Mike French, operators of the dairy, said at least 10 employees were in the store at the time. Only two were accounted for today.

When the explosion rocked the building, said they had smelled "something like sewer gas." They said they had no idea how many customers were in the store at the time.

Bodies of the dead were covered with blankets and put in the temporary morgue in a nearby garage. No effort was made immediately to establish identities.

The injured, many in critical and serious condition, were taken to hospitals in Ashland, Youngstown and Conneaut.

James Strickler, program director for radio station WMTW, Meadville, Pa., reported from the scene that only a pile of debris remained where the big two-story brick building once stood. It housed food stores, a hardware store and other commercial establishments besides the dairy and restaurant.

Two other buildings, one housing the Ohio Edison Telephone Co. exchange, were gutted by fire and flames spread rapidly. The town was isolated for several hours without telephone service, or electric power.

Other members of the American delegation pointed out that the Russians use much more manpower on farms than Americans. At some state farms, the Americans found as many as 20 times the workers employed on a comparable farm in the United States.

Wednesday afternoon the Americans visited seven farm homes and found they differed greatly from their own back home. The houses all had three or four rooms with beds in almost every room. As many as seven persons lived in each house. All had large corner stoves that heated the rooms and Dutch ovens for cooking, although hotplates generally are used in the summer.

Three homes had radios and two had Russian Orthodox Madonnas on the wall. Old-fashioned hand sewing machines and heavy irons heated on the stoves were almost in all the houses.

The Americans were fascinated by a wooden cradle hanging from a ceiling, and a bed over an oven. The Americans figured the latter bed would roast the sleeper, but the Russians assured them it was most practical for cold weather.

The Americans headed eastward today into central Asia and Siberia where they will tour until they return to Moscow Aug. 18 or 19.

RUSSIA, Aug. 11 (AP) — An American farmer stunned his Russian hosts Wednesday night when he said his wife did not help him in the fields or barns.

The Russians, who delegate much hard labor to women, shook their heads in amazement. They simply could not believe that Charles Haast limited his wife's work to the house, kitchen and garden on their large farm at Odesa Falls, Iowa.

Haast, one of 12 American farmers touring Russia, provided the Soviets with many surprises when he was asked to tell about his farm at a reception here.

For instance, he set the Russians to butting amongst themselves when he told them he worked a 320-acre corn and hog farm with the help of only one hired man and a school boy in summer.

The Russians asked if Haast was kidding, especially when he told them he raised 500 to 1,000 hogs a year besides working the land.

Scientist Warns World Of Danger Of Dread "Runaway" Nuclear Reactor In Accident Case

By WILLIAM SEXTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
GENEVA, Aug. 10 (AP) — The California scientist who unlocked the secret of the hydrogen bomb warned the world today of a new danger — the dread "runaway" nuclear reactors that could be as dangerous as the atom bomb itself.

The warning was delivered in a paper from Edward Teller of the University of California, known as the "Father of the hydrogen bomb" and was echoed in papers by British and Soviet scientists at the Atoms-for-Peace conference here.

Teller, working with Rogers McCullough of the Atomic Energy Commission, and Mark Wills of the University of California, drafted one of the most dramatic papers of the conference. It was read today by McCullough.

Split Second Disaster
He warned that runaway nuclear furnaces may force evacuation of entire cities, poison entire watersheds and turn stretches of land into forbidden areas for a reactor accident.

It could be a split second disaster but an industrial disaster unknown before to the world.

The scientists said nuclear fission must be made as safe as gas or electricity for the era of atomic power is near at hand. They identified an unceasing search for devices to make nuclear fission safe in the laboratories of two continents.

The paper said that "with all the inherent safeguards that can be put into a reactor, there is still no fool-proof system."

They are unfortunately certain dangerous characteristics — and his this public hazard has been one of our main concerns."

It was symbolic of the aims of the conference that one of the major papers on saving lives in the new age, when nuclear reactors already are on the drawing boards, should come from the man responsible for the most lethal weapon of history.

"Perhaps," the Teller-McCullough-Wills paper said, "it is important to emphasize the degree of public hazard that might follow a reactor accident."

"Assuming that good luck prevails and no one is killed, it may nevertheless be necessary to evacuate a large city, to abandon a major watershed and very probably it would be necessary to make the reactor site itself a forbidden area for years to come."

A reassuring note came from Argonne National Laboratories in the United States who read a paper incorporating the work of 32 other scientists on experiments in which 200 runaway reactor accidents were deliberately staged at Los Alamos and Oak Ridge.

These small reactors of water-cooled types appear to have reached a "high degree of inherent safety," he said.

Britain's W. G. Marley and T. M. Frey of the Harwell Laboratories said they did not think the safety problem was "insuperable." But they urged that atomic plants be built away from heavily populated areas in such a way that only limited quantities of radioactive material would be released in event of an accident.

Who's Hardest Hitters In Baseball

By JACK CUDDY

United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Who's the hardest hitter in baseball today? Dugout consensus indicates a toss-up between Ted Kluszewski of the Redlegs, Mickey Mantle of the Yankees, Duke Snider of the Dodgers and Larry Doby of the Indians.

"The only man I've ever seen hit a ball with as much power as Kluszewski," says Cincinnati Manager Birdie Tebbets, "was Larry Gehrig. Klu hits a ball so hard that he leaves the imprint on his bat."

This is no idle statement by Tebbets, inasmuch as the last part of it is verified by batboys around the National League.

Big Johnny Mize, another extraordinary power hitter during his prime, agrees with Tebbets.

"I haven't seen anyone in the National League who hits a ball harder than Kluszewski," he says. "A lot of his outs travel farther than most fellows' home runs."

Some National League observers, however, insist Snider hits a ball just as hard and as far as Kluszewski when he gets a hold of it.

Duke has hit some balls that actually appeared to jump off his bat," offers teammate Pee Wee Reese. "I'll admit you have to have plenty of muscle to rip a ball like Kluszewski does, but if anyone can give him competition, Duke certainly can."

Over in the American League, Mantle wins the majority of votes while Doby ranks a fairly close second. It is significant that Mantle and Doby both love to swing from the heels and invariably are high up on the strike list as well as in the home run department.

Yankee Coach Bill Dickey says no man in the majors hits a ball harder than Mantle "when Mickey hits it clean." Dickey, who played on the same club as Babe Ruth and Gehrig, insists Mantle hits with the same power they did.

"Like Mantle, Doby has hit his share of 400-foot wallopers and even one or two balls that reportedly traveled more than 500 feet.

"There are times when the ball leaves Doby's bat like a rocket," says Cleveland Manager Al Lopez. "On some of his drives, I honestly don't see how it is possible for anyone to get more power into his swing than Doby does."

Other sluggers around who get more than average mileage out of their homers is that he doesn't pull the ball consistently.

Wally Post of Cincinnati and Frank Thomas of Pittsburgh are another pair who get plenty of muscle behind their smashes. Like wise Ted Williams hasn't yet lost

Unfinished Crime

by Helen McCloy

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN
SARA took a deep breath. "Because I saw the real Gerry Hone tonight."

"What?" If her purpose had been to startle Clive, she had certainly succeeded.

"He wasn't a delusion. He was as real as you are, sitting here, in this room, talking to me. I didn't just see him, I heard him. I touched him. The fake Gerry is a former movie actor named Mark Clifford. The real Gerry was his stand-in long ago."

Clive's face was harder than she had ever seen it before. "Will you tell me just what happened?"

It was a matter of fact to Clive. Sara was careful to tell her tale carefully, marshaling all the facts in chronological order. "Now," she said at the end. "Does that sound like the delusions of a paranoiac?"

"No. It sounds much more serious than insanity."

"Crime," he spoke slowly. "This becomes fascinating. Rather like a problem in chess. The various possible combinations."

"I see only one," retorted Sara. When Gerry disappeared, an impostor took his place, because the impostor believed Gerry had hidden the ruby in his apartment or office."

"And, why couldn't the real Gerry understand the impostor, yet?"

"Maybe he wants to give the cat enough rope."

Clive's keen eyes glittered in the lamplight. "My dear, are you tough-minded or tender-minded?"

"I hope William James would class me with the tough-minded, though I'm sure Mickey Spillane would not."

"Are you strong enough to stand one more shock this evening? A shock that may bring you the final truth about this whole matter?"

"After so much doubt and uncertainty any truth would be a relief, however shocking."

"Algebraic problems are often solved by inversion. Try inverting this business of Gerry Hone."

"Sara's brow bent in thought. "How?"

"There was an impostor who did impersonate Gerry Hone. Your premise was right. But one of your inferences was wrong. You inferred that the impersonation was the result of a disappearance and, therefore, took place after the disappearance. Actually, the impersonation took place before the disappearance was a result of the impersonation."

"What do you mean?"

"The man who met you in the 10-cent store and deserted you in the Automat was the impostor, Mark Clifford. It was then and only then that any impersonation took place. The man who appeared in Gerry Hone's apartment this morning was the real Gerry Hone, returning from a visit to Mrs. Harrison, as she and every one else, but you, stoutly maintained."

Sara's head was ringing as if she had received a physical blow. But when the dizziness waned all the facts began to click into their appointed places.

"The impersonation had lasted only a few minutes. No successful impersonation could last much longer in real life. Yesterday the new glasses she had put were only two days old, making everything brighter and clearer. Anything about the impersonation that she had never noticed before, she had noticed now. The real Gerry, she would attribute subconsciously to the new glasses. That the real Gerry appeared, she saw him clearly for the first time in her life through the new glasses. Of course, that made him seem unfamiliar and she knew instantly that he was not the same man she had seen in the 10-cent store the day before."

And the voice? The real Gerry was hoarse with a bad cold the last few times they were together before the impersonation. If the "fake Gerry" voice sounded a little deeper and clearer, at first, she would think he had simply got over his cold. But when the real Gerry returned, without any hoarseness, she would notice how high and light his voice sounded in contrast to the other Gerry and it would seem a further proof of impersonation."

"Why?" Her voice was a broken whisper. "Why did he want me to think he was Gerry Hone when we met in the 10-cent store?"

He didn't plan it that way," retorted Clive. "Remember how it happened? You saw him before he saw you. It was you who addressed him first. It was you who addressed him as Gerry."

Money In Producing Changes Mind

Editors Note: Aline Masby is on vacation. Today's guest columnist is Jim Henaghan, a magazine writer and Hollywood columnist. Recently Jim started Hollywood by turning up as the producer of a $7,500,000 movie, "Gettysburg," starring John Wayne. How did he do it?

By JIM HENAGHAN
Written For The United Press

HOLLYWOOD—The other day there was a big story in the paper that I was giving up the profession of newspapering to become a producer. Ever since then most of my friends, as well as a lot of people who hate me, have asked questions about how a fellow goes about this sort of thing.

Like Josephine, the girl down at the drugstore where I get my breakfast every morning, "What's all this baloney?" she said, "I heard about you becoming a producer."

Wasn't Sore
I wasn't sore at Jo, but felt it was time she realized my social position had changed. It all has to do with a state of mind. I mean, a guy can hang around Hollywood for years, like I did, carrying his own shirts to the laundromat, and suddenly he looks at a palatial estate in Beverly Hills and says, "why don't I live there?"

And so you decide to be a producer. You go to lunch at Romanoff's and when the waiter brings the bill you don't even change—only you just write something on it and walk out like you had a charge account, and on the way you clap Mike Romanoff on the back good, so his monocle falls out. That way he thinks he knows you.

Variety In Your Pocket
You walk around all day with Variety and the Hollywood Reporter in your pocket. You're seen walking out of big office buildings in a hurry. You send lots of telegrams. They can be about anything. It doesn't matter much what to Zanuck, Schary, Hartman and Jack Warner.

You wear tailor-made clothes, drive a Jaguar, and rub your thumb a great deal. It's as simple as all that. And there's an even simpler way. You start out as a messenger boy. You get to work early, and you stay late, and pretty soon you're in the mimeograph room. Then you get a job in the cutting room, and pretty soon you're a cutter, and so on. And at the end of 20 years, you marry the boss' daughter, and you get to be a producer.

How did I do it? You don't think I'm going to tell that, do you?

CHOCOLATE ODORS CAUSE OF APPEARANCE

PHILADELPHIA—Mrs. Mary Epik appeared before the city Zoning Board of Adjustment to protest the petition of her next door neighbor, Robert Enson, for a permit to operate a flavor processing business in his home.

She said a vent in Edinson's home blew chocolate odors all through her house and "I can't tell what I'm eating, everything tastes like chocolate."

YOUNG JURYMEN

NEW ORLEANS—Mark Zelman showed up for jury service wearing his Davy Crockett shirt and clutching his notice that he had been selected for duty. Mark is six years old.

Jury Commissioner Joseph Scardario excused him, remarking that "We try to avoid getting six year-olds; they are not good jury material."

NOT ENOUGH

MARSEILLE, France—Taxi driver Mamel Guerpillon deposited two gesseters from the Foreign Legion robbed him of his wallet, saw it contained only about 3,000 francs, about $7.40 and returned it to him because "it wasn't enough."

1st Degree Murder

MRS. KATHERINE HAYNES, 28, is free (above) on bond after being indicted in Washington on charge of first degree murder in the fatal shooting of Nancy Penton, 19, her husband's admitted mistress. The indictment against the mother of four daughters followed a ruling of accidental death by an all-male coroner's jury. (International)
